Question - Delivery of Personal Items to the Office - Update 3

Dear All,

Do you face a problem where staff purchased personal items online and then got it delivered to the office?

How do you handle such situation since it has become a growing trend? Other staff have to sign on behalf if buyer is away from workstation when delivery arrived.

PL

We discouraged such practice and told the staff not to arrange any personal items to be sent to the office.

EQ

REPLY 2

There is no problem.

Lynda

REPLY 3

In policy, we do not allow such delivery.

Hans Shu

REPLY 4

Yes, it's a trend but we don't have a policy prohibiting it.

Nancy

REPLY 5

We keep personal transactions outside the working environment.

We have no problem with it. It is a trend and with smaller families and members working or studying, there is nobody at home to receive it. We understand and accommodate.
