

HRLAW

Harassment in the Workplace

HR practitioners need to be aware that their employees in Singapore are subject to the Protection of Harassment Act. This implies that employees who bully, stalk, annoy, harass or engage in other forms of anti-social behaviour in the workplace can be construed to have committed an offence under this act and could face punishment like fines or a prison sentence. And in other countries where such protections exist, the company could also be held liable if they were aware and did nothing if such behaviour has taken place and continues to do so.

Reply | HRLAW Community | Archives | Forward

Dealing with Workplace Bullying & Harassment - 19 Jan

This seminar will introduce you to the Protection from Harassment Act 2014 and the challenges it places on HR professionals as well as best practice strategies and policies to deal with bullying and harassment...more

Your Advertisement Here?

We offer very affordable rates for advertising jobs or non competing products and services to our HR Community...more

HRSINGAPORE® HRLAW™

A Decade of Helping HR People Succeed!

Share on Facebook

Send to Twitter

Forward Email

