Question - Office Practice

Dear all,

I have a unique situation in the office which is seldom practice elsewhere in Singapore. How do you monitor an employee who is allowed to work from home not in Singapore (at his home country with 4-5 hrs time difference) for a couple of weeks. Especially the company is slowing down mode with less project in hand.

Is it norm for a company to not give performance bonus to all employees except to selected few that are considered irreplaceable?

Appreciate for a feedback as other employees are affected by it and deems make them demoralised.

Thank you.

Developing An Employee Handbook Workshop (15th Run)

- 25 November 2015

The employee handbook can help ensure that all HR policies and practices conform to legal requirements. Employers can use the policies in the employee handbook to protect themselves against possible lawsuits pertaining to harassment, wrongful termination, discrimination claims etc.

Participants attending this workshop will be provided with a comprehensive template for an Employee Handbook!
